BRAD'S BLOG

The show season is here once again starting with a very good group of Mustangs at "Mustang" McDonalds last month. We had 22 cars and devoured two full sheet cakes on a sunny evening April 17 for the Mustang's 48th birthday.

Plans are set for the Shelby Spring Fling in Brown County May 18-20. Rose McClure is the one to contact for more information this year. Let me warn you, if you've never been to it, don't. You'll be hooked and want to go every year!

Also set are the Memorial Day parades: South Bend West Side meet at 7:30 AM in the old K Mart parking lot by Burger King on Western Ave; Mishawaka around 9:00 AM TBA soon and Elkhart on Third St. by 1:30 PM. I'll send out a reminder e-mail later.

As I said, the show season is here: beginning May 3rd at Das Dutchman Essenhaus and every Thursday through September; a show & shine at Eby Ford in Goshen June 2nd; another one June 16th at Zeigler Ford in Elkhart and one more at Bremen Ford June 30th.

June is busting out all over...

See you May 14th at Honkers.

P. S. Save your cash. Carl informed me that the Ford trailer will once again be at our show August 11.

Exercise for Seniors

Just came across this exercise suggested for seniors to build muscle strength in the arms and shoulders. It seems easy, so we're passing it on. The article suggested doing it three days a week.

Begin by standing on a comfortable surface, where you have plenty of room at each side. With a 5 lb. potato sack in each hand, extend your arms straight out from your sides, then hold them there as long as you can. Try to reach a full minute, and then relax.

Each day, you'll find that you can hold this position for just a bit longer. After a couple of weeks, move up to 10 lb. potato sacks. Then 50 lb. potato sacks and, eventually, try to get to where you can lift a 100 lb. potato sack in each and hold your arms straight for more than a full minute.

After you feel confident at that level, put a potato in each of the sacks; but be careful.

Mustang's 48th Birthday Party

22 Mustangs filled the lot at 'Mustang' McDonalds on April 17 for our traditional Mustang Birthday Party. Before the night was over two sheet cakes had been polished off by members and other McDonalds customers.

Many thanks to Mustang McDonalds for having us once again.

We had lots of traffic around the cars all night

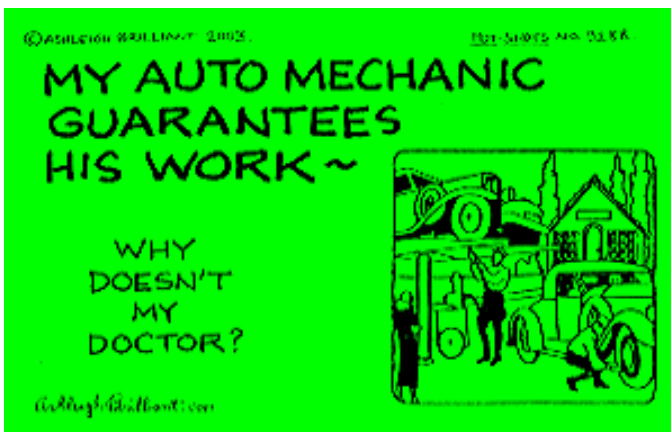

It was nice to see us on the sign this year

As always, the best part was the visiting with each other...

Let everyone eat cake!

Next Ford Mustang going global

By Zach Bowman
Posted Apr 12th 2012 6:01PM

It was only a matter of time before Ford pushed the Mustang out of the American nest and into the global market. According to PopularHotRodding.com and Auto-Motor-Und-Sport.de, that time has come. The German site quotes Barb Samardzich, head of development for Ford Europe, as saying the next-generation Mustang is being designed to meet European Union pedestrian safety regulations, despite the fact that no formal decision has been made on whether or not buyers in the EU will be able to get their hands on the Pony.

Then there's Popular Hot Rodding, which has gathered news from far and wide into a lengthy composite of what the future may bring for the Mustang. Tucked among sourceless whispers of a hybrid drivetrain, an independent rear suspension and a whole new design language is the indication that the performance coupe is being prepped for sale in the UK, Australia and even Japan.

That's good news for buyers who have been forced to content themselves with grey-market imports until now. Popular Hot Rodding also indicates the new model may shave as much as 300 pounds to increase performance while maintaining today's power levels. How much of this is true? We'll find out when the 2015 Ford Mustang debuts in 2014.

Next Ford Mustang to follow Evos concept, ditch retro styling, report says

Ford insiders say the next generation of the Mustang will take its styling cues from the Evos concept car, shown.

By: Dale Jewett on 4/16/2012

The Ford Mustang has been rolling with a retro-heavy styling theme since the fourth generation of the pony car appeared as a 1994 model.

But the Wall Street Journal reports that the sixth-generation Mustang, due out in about two years, will break that mold.

The newspaper, citing sources it did not name who know of Ford's plans, says that the new Mustang will look a lot like the Evos concept from last year's Frankfurt show.

Why? Ford wants to attract younger buyers to the Mustang. The group of those who have fond memories of the original 1964 Mustang is shrinking.

Also, the Mustang has been getting beaten in the sales race by the revived Chevrolet Camaro. Through the first three months of this year, Chevy has sold 21,924 Camaros, while Ford has sold 20,133 Mustangs, a gap of nearly 1,800 cars. For 2011, the Camaro outdistanced the Mustang by 17,811 cars--88,249 Camaros to 70,438 Mustangs.

But Ford is working to keep the Mustang in the hunt. For the 2013 model, which goes on sale later this spring, it has boosted engine output of the top-line Mustang Shelby GT500 to 650 hp. That puts the Mustang some 70 hp ahead of the 580-hp Camaro ZL1.

Roush introduces three stages of fun for the 2013 Ford Mustang

By: David Arnouts on 4/09/2012

Roush Performance is synonymous with high-performance Ford Mustangs, and for 2013 Mustangs, Roush will offer three stages of enhancement.

For those who prefer cosmetics over performance, the Stage One kit consists of the R6 aerobody package, which includes a remodeled front end, a hood scoop, rocker panels, a three-piece rear decklid spoiler, race-inspired (not CFD tested) diffusers and new chrome exhaust tips.

Stage Two is a step up for performance-minded Mustang fans. This package adds upgraded suspension components to the Stage One offerings. Improvements also include beefed-up stabilizer bars, twin-tube shocks, improved bushings and rear control arms to help eliminate wheel hop during generous throttle applications. Stage Two also includes 18-inch aluminum wheels with Cooper RS3 ultra-high-performance summer tires.

For those willing to put their money where their mouths are, the Stage Three package is available with a supercharged 5.0-liter Coyote engine that churns out 565 hp and 505 lb-ft of torque. It's the highest horsepower street-legal Roush Mustang to date.

The customization options continue in the interior, with a custom gauge cluster, special floor mats and a few other features.

Prices range from $4,500 for the Stage One package to $16,500 for the Stage Three treatment, plus any additional accessories or add-ons ordered. Of course, these prices are in addition to the cost of a 2013 Mustang.

Roush opened ordering to Ford dealers in March, and more than 200 orders have been placed. Check with your local Ford dealer for more information; Roush Mustangs will be on the lots this month.

Ford developing way to make car parts from cash

By Autoblog Staff RSS feed

Posted Apr 23rd 2012 7:57AM

Ford is looking to put a new twist on the term "old money." The automaker may add old, shredded, out-of-circulation U.S. paper currency to its list of recyclable materials that may be used for cushions, insulation and other components.

With about 10,000 pounds of paper money being shredded per day, Ford is exploring adding it to a list of recyclable or reclaimed materials that includes soybeans, denim and plastic bottles.

Ford has cut its petroleum use by about 5 million pounds a year by using soy-based material for foam that is installed in seat cushions and head restraints. And each Ford Fusion is built with the denim-equivalent of about two pairs of blue jeans that's used for sound-dampening purposes.

Ford started looking into using recycled materials about ten years ago as a way to cut use of petroleum in components that usually require plastic. At that time, oil cost about one-seventh of what it costs now.

In January, the company said it would use recycled plastic bottles from the North American Auto Show in Detroit and the Consumer Electronics Show in Las Vegas to create part of the polyester fiber used in the Ford Focus Electric's seats.

Mustang Club of Poland inspires Mustang Club of Parana to make video

By Zach Bowman RSS feed

Posted Apr 17th 2012 7:29PM

It looks as if the Mustang Club of Poland has inspired its South American counterparts to get in on a little movie-making action. The Mustang Club of Parana got together with a few local sponsors to commemorate the group's eleventh anniversary with a brief flick starring some of Brazil's most diehard Ford Mustang fans.

Every generation of Mustang development gets at least a little time on screen, from less-loved members of the clan like the Mustang II to a few ever-popular Eleanor replicas. The video took its creators just over three months to produce, and the final product is clean and well-edited.

There's plenty of engine note, smoky burnouts and sharp sheet metal to obsess over, too. So, is this better than the Polish original? We aren't picking sides on this one. Both videos are a great way to blow a chunk of the work day.

The Three Most Important Words

At a wedding, the D.J. polled the guests to see who had been married the longest.

The winners were then asked, "What advice do you have for the newlyweds?"

The wife quickly responded, "The three most important words in a marriage are 'You're probably right'."

Everyone then looked at the husband.

He said, "Yeah. She's probably right!"

The Journal

A twelve-year-old boy received a journal as a birthday gift. He looked at it carefully, but was mystified.

"Mom, what's the deal with this book? All the pages are blank," he asked.

"That's called a journal," she explained. "You write down interesting stuff that happens to you."

His face brightened as he caught her drift.

"So it's kinda like a blog, only on paper?!"

Ford Mustang Shelby GT500 certified at 662 hp?

By: Davey G. Johnson on 4/26/2012

When the Ferrari Enzo burst out of the Italian sunrise 10 years ago, its Tipo F140 12-cylinder boasted a spleen-rending 651 hp.

Oh, the difference a decade makes.

This year, you can pop down to your local Ford dealership, lay down cash roughly equivalent to what would buy you an execrable Lincoln MKS and roll out in a machine with 662 ponies bucking under the hood.

When Ford announced the car late last year, the company noted that the Mustang Shelby GT500 boasted 650 hp and was capable of 200 mph. According to a source we spoke to, Ford struggled for those last couple of mph, but the car would hit 198 with ease. That's no mean feat, since the GT500 still maintains a shape reminiscent of the 1970 model.

Now, word has come down through what seems like a credible post on the Team Shelby forum that the SAE has certified the GT500's blown 5.8-liter engine at 662 hp and 630 lb-ft of torque. That's 40 hp more than the last Porsche 911 GT2 RS and 24 hp more than the cross-town horsepower rival Chevrolet Camaro ZR1's LS9. It's 22 hp more than the new SRT Viper. It's also 82 hp more than the Camaro ZL1's 580.

Ford refused to confirm the claim when we called this afternoon. The company also did not deny it. It wasn't the first rumbling we'd heard from a knowledgeable source that the SAE-certified horsepower number was higher than the original specification, either. Regardless, it seems safe to say that the GT500 is churning out more power than advertised.

Dear people in the RenCen: For many years, your Camaro trounced the Mustang's power-output figures. Will you let this aggression stand unchecked?

Dear Sergio: Your company was building cars making close to this sort of power a decade ago. Will you not apply some of that knowledge to help your American arm stomp the brassy boys from Dearborn? Did not, after all, OI' Shel help you midwife the Viper, only to turn back to his old masters at Ford? Can you countenance that?

No, Auburn Hills. No, Renaissance Center, you cannot possibly be OK with this. Unless, of course, you're chicken. You're not chicken, are you? Are you?
